

University of Basel Immunology Community (UBICO) retreat 2019

The University of Basel Immunology Community (UBICO) retreat brings together diverse researchers from groups working in the field of immunology and infectious diseases at the University of Basel. It contributes to the education and training of students in immunology and fosters new collaborations between research groups of the immunology network Basel. The 2019 retreat was held in Engelberg from March 25 – March 26. During these two days, largely unpublished data were presented and discussed in a collaborative forum by more than 90 participants. The topics of 20 oral presentations ranged from basic research to translational studies and clinical patient studies reflecting the broad spectrum of innovative immunological research performed by the UBICO groups. A poster session with beer, wine and vivid debates marked the end of the first day. The scientific projects were presented by PhD students, MD-PhD students and postdocs and lively discussions were regularly continued beyond the seminar rooms during coffee breaks and meals.
